DEAL WITH THE BODY, HEAL WITH THE HEART.

Yoga, an ancient philosophy and practice that originated in India, has been a system of health and well-being for thousands of years. Its rich approach combined with its simplicity in implementation has sustained its role in nourishing people for generations. One of the key advantages of a system like Yoga is that it views the human system as a holistic entity and hence approaches health and well being too from this perspective. This is why it offers so many tools in the healing process that address the holistic human system. Though Yoga is today associated mostly with postures, that is just one of the many tools that yoga has to offer. Some of the most profound tools in Yoga include conscious breathing regulation, meditation, life-style changes, visualizations, use of vocal sounds and food specifications among many others. This makes the healing process very comprehensive and extremely specific to the individual.

The other key advantage of Yoga is that it empowers people in the healing process. Rather than being a passive recipient of treatment, the student is actively engaged in the path to well-being and is primarily responsible for his/her recovery. The role of the teacher becomes to act as a mere guide in directing the student to the tools for recovery and teaching the right way to implement them. Once this is done, it is then the role of the student to practice it diligently, observe changes, and notify the teacher for any changes. Thus the healing comes from within the student, rather than from the outside. This powerful system has helped many millions of care seekers to find holistic solutions to address a range of health concerns.

This great art was perfected and presented by T Krishnamacharya, one of the most important yogis of our modern times. It was continued and shared around the world by his son and most prominent student TKV Desikachar. Both of them healed and revived many people from all kinds of problems through this holistic, yet simple approach. Their work is now being carried on by Dr. Kausthub Desikachar, co-founder and chief Yoga Therapist of the Krishnamacharya Healing & Yoga Foundation.

This practical second seminar, will explore the application of Viniyoga's understanding of Emotional and Spiritual disorders and how to use the holistic range of tools to aid the care seeker in their healing process. The weekend immersion will include both theoretical presentations and workshops on observation, as well as energizing practices encompassing the multi-dimensional tools of Yoga. Participants will engage with practices that will not only include Asana and Pranayama, but also Mantra (Sacred Chants), Nyasa (Energetic Gestures) and Bhavana (Appropriate visualizations).

This exclusive seminar series is open to all, and will be particularly suitable for those who wish to dive deep into the authentic form of Yoga Therapy, and its practical implementation as a complementary health care paradigm. In order to facilitate a more personal and deeper experience of learning, participation will be limited. Hence it is strongly advised to book early to secure your spot. A Certificate of Participation will be issued to all participants, who can take this course towards continuing education credit.

This seminar series will function as a preparatory event to the KHYF Viniyoga therapy training being offered in NZ for the first time in 2020, for those who have not completed a teacher training qualification in this lineage.
